FRANCIS MARION CRAWFORD

The Famous Novelist Returns to America After an Absence of Ten Years.

He Tells Why He Has Lived Abroad, Talks of His Own Work and that of Others, and Gives His Idea of the Uses of the Novel

Special Correspondence of the Sunday Journal. NEW YORK, Nov. 26,-Marion Crawford did not reach New York until Wednesday evening. He was aboard the North German Lloyd steamer Fulds from Genoa, which arrived at the bar at 3:20, and at once passed to her dock. He immediately took up his headquarters at the Everett House, where he plans to remain for a few days, until he has completed arrangements with Major Pond for readings, which he intends to give in New York and Boston.

It is ten years since Mr. Crawford was here. He was born in a little town just out of Rome, where his father, Thomas Crawford, the noted sculptor, made his home, and all his sisters were born in Rome. Still be is an American, he declares, and he owns a farm up in New Hampshire, where he intends to live some day, and he means to give his boyean American education, probably at St. Paul's School, in Concord, N. H., where he himself was educated. But having lived in Italy so much, he took to himself a wife there, and has made his bome just beyond Sorrento, where he has a villa in collaborateur. She reads all the criticisms of his books that the Mesers, Macmillan send him, selecting such as the thinks may interest him and reading them aloud to her busband. To her he reads aloud his books as he writes them, pase by page, and it is she-and Frederick Macmillan-who give him all his advice.

Marion Crawford is a young man, tall and well formed. We who have known him by his only published portraits think of him as a man with a fine beard, but he hasn't that now; only a clear brown mustache, with brown hair decidedly darker. His manners have much of the Italian ease and grace, and his tongue catches the Italian accent now and then, in spite of the fact that he is a genuine American. He does not take life too seriously; he is fond of good living and good society, and there can be no doubt that in Rome he was a Roman, a genuine member of that peculiar and highly interesting society which he has described so carefully in the series of novels beginning with "Saracinesca" and coming down not only to "Don Orsino." just published, but including another story, which he considers the best of them all which will begin shortly as an illustrated serial in the Ladies' Pictorial, a very highpriced London periodical. He has also completed another novel of Italian sea life. which will come out as a book some time in January, probably.

WHY HE LIVES ABROAD. "I have not lived away from my own country because I wished it or thought it better for my literary work, only because circumstances compelled me," said he when I called to see him yesterday. "I have regretted it, and I mean to come to New York to live yet. I should like to try to write about New York society, but I am a little afraid, especially when Mr. Howells has done it so well, and I know so little of it. I have a great admiration for what Mr. Howells has done in building up the American povel, and I am reluctant to try to compete with him.

"I have often told the story of how I began to write. It was by mere accident. I was in India and knew the story of Mr. Jacobs and more for my own amusement than anything else began to write 'Mr. Isaacs.' I had no idea how it was coming out. I just wrote on from page to page. When it was done I sent it to some of my riends with not an idea that it would be published. But I had tasted blood. I wanted to try some more, and so began Dr. Claudius.' In the meantime I heard that 'Mr. Isaacs' was going to be published. "Which do I think the best? You say some like the 'Roman Singer.' That was rather a youthful attempt. There are some bad things in it that I never took the time to go back and correct. I got into some little trouble with it, and had to kill off a character that I didn't want to-such little things as that in it, you know. But it has been popular for its local color, not much 'Marzio's Crucifix,' I think, is the most perfect story, unless this one I have just written is better. 'Marzio's Crucifix' worked out best in its plot and construction, most completely.

"My studies of Roman society seem to have been very popular. Of course, when one is studying the same society the same types must come in again and again, and I think it best to use the same characters more or less injsucceeding books. Shall I follow it up with another? Well, I don't know. There are two minor characters in this last book which I have been much interested in. They may lead me off in another direc-

CAN'T WRITE SHORT STORIES. "You haven't written many short stories!"

"No," said he, "I never could seem to do it. Besides, when I have a good idea I like to spread it out and show it up well; not compress it into a narrow compass as one from taking any part in every official function does in a short story. You has no your mat. since the tragic death of Crown Prince Rudolph, does in a short story. You use up your mat ter and don't get the money for it. Besides. the short story has been carried to such perfection now, so many do it so well I don't feel altogether able to compete with them. And then my mind arranges a story to be told in just about so much space, and I don't go below or beyond it.

"I think every good dramatic novel ought to be able to be dramatized, though, of course, there are a great many stories of travel and so ferth that can never make dramas. Local color is a good thing-interesting-but in my library I class novels of local color under the head of travel. They are travel, not novels. I have made some sketches of plans toward dramatizing some of my stories, such as 'Zoroaster.' which seemed to be a pretty good subject. But I never did it. Some have tried, though not successfully. I believe, The right persons did not get hold of the matter. The proper way is the plan they follow out so much in France. There most good novels are dramatized. The author himself, however, never thinks of making his own play. He gets a collaborateur, familiar with the stage and stage settings, and the art of arranging words to be spoken instead of read. There is a great difference between the two, spoken and written language. On the written page capitals, dashes, paragraphing, all convey a meaning to the eye that spoken words lose. What would Carlyle's 'Frederick the Great' be if read aloud? Oh, yes, the work is very different, and I doubt if a novelist could ever hope to succeed as a dramatist, though, as I have said, with the added skill of a dramatist every successful novel ought to be of a kind to make a good play."

THE NOVEL IS EPHEMERAL. Some people talk about the Shakspeare of the novel, hoping the novel will come to have a place in litersture with the drama. Mr. Crawford says he thinks the novel out an ephemeral thing. It has been the fashion only for about a hundred years, and in another hundred years it will go out of fashion again, probably. It is too rasily written, he says, ever to be great. A man who cares anything about making a living out of fiction can't afford to take time to go back and perfect his work. Henry James told me himself that he wrote his "Portrait of a Lady" over three times-actually rewrote every word of it three times, I don't believe a man without an independent fortune could afford to do that, coul take the time. I wouldn't, anyway. 'No; to me the object of the novel seems to be to amuse the public. A philosophic principle in a novel hurts it. Of course, the tendency of the novel must be good, not bad; but, if it is not actually bad, and the book amuses, it is an ideal novel. What interests humanity is humanity. however, and though local color, that is dress, belps to interest, the ideal novel is about men and women as such. The novel is written for the realer and not for the writer, and whatever interests and amuses the public is the legitimate subject of the novel, and what does interest and amuse are stories about the hearts of men.'

to be very careful not to draw disagreeable portraits of his acquaintances. "I take types," he said, "and when once set going in a book they work out their own salvation. But, of course, they are more or less like my friends. 'Saracinesea' was practically a portrait of a friend of

We had been smoking our cigars together as we talked in the reading-room at the Everett Honse. They were Italian cigars, a little damp from the sea voyage, Mr. Crawford said; but they were mild and sweet, quite different from any I have smoked in New York before. He took Mr. Howell's address, which I gave him, and said he was going to call on that gentle-man at once. Saturday he plans to visit his sister in Tarrytown. Later he will go to Newport and Boston and visit Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, "his annty." He plans to remain here until spring. Possibly this visit will hasten his plan to make his permanent residence here.

The Reichstag Will Not Blindly Vote 585,000,000 Marks for the Army.

If It Is Necessary to Pass the Bill the Chancellor Will Make a Bargain with the Centrists, Who Want the Anti-Jesuit Law Repea ed.

[Copyright, 1892, by the Associated Press.] BERLIN, Nov. 26 .- When the debate on the imperial budget opens in the Reichstag on Wednesday next, some indication will be given as to the manner in which the parwhich were written the greater number of | ties are likely to range themselves on the his famous novels, with his wife as his army bill. The army estimates that were prepared, independently of the increased expenditures involved through the new bill, amount to 585,000,000 marks, being 12,-500,000 marks over the amount contained in the last budget. There is an almost unanimous feeling among the members of the Reichstag against proceeding with the army bill until the government's financial projects connected with the measure are fully disclosed. The house will compel Chancellor Von Caprivi to make an explicit statement during the official investi-

> In the meantime, if the tone of the Ceninfallible guide, the fate of the army bill would be settled. According to these organs the measure will be defeated on its first reading, Chancellor Von Caprivi will resign within a fortnight, and the Reichstag will be dissolved soon after he leaves office. The elections for new members will end in January, and will result in a stronger opposition than is in the present house. Government officials are confident that none of these predictions will be fulfilled. They say the bill will be debated on Dec. 5, and it will pass the first reading by a fair majority. Then t will be remitted to a committee. If the Center party requires that its support be bought by the Chanceller agreeing not to oppose the Centrist measure permitting the return of the Jesuits to Germany, then a bargain will be struck. This would bring the government seventy votes. Chancellor Von Caprivi, as recently as the last session, opposed the Centrists' proposal to repeal the law against the Jesuits. but that party has chosen the right moment to bring pressure on the government, which will surrender and will neither oppose nor support the bill, but will let the Centrists pass the asure with the assistance of the Freisinnige party, the Socialists and the Poles, all of whom ould vote for the repeal of the present anti-Jesuit law. The German people as a whole are few hundred of whom would not be felt by the country. About forty Centrists who do not support the plans of the remainder of the party will ppose the bill. The government has also to take into consideration the wrath that will be aroused among the Conservatives by the return of the Jesuits, and which will counter-balance the other considerations. The ministerial circle continues confident that the government will

The lower house of the Prussian Diet is aborbed in the discussion of Finance Minister Miquel's fiscal reforms. The spectacle of ex-Minister Herrwurth denouncing his former coleagues is almost an unknown event in the his tory of the Landtag. His speeches have caused several rows. Count Limbourgsturm upbraided Herr Herrfurth for assuming an attitude that was unworthy a statesman who had just quitted office. Herr Herrfurth seemed to be stunned by this reproach. He replied that he had bee obliged to resign because, while he was Minister of the Interior, he refused to submit to the demands of the Bavarian Parliament, claiming that their interests were protected at the expense of others, Minister Miquei's proposals, with some minor amendments, were to-day referred to a committee. The Diet then adjourned

Court and diplomatic circles here are excited over a report that the Czarewitch, during his recent visit to Vienna, paid marked attentions rincess Maria Annunciade, daughter of Duke Karl Ludwig, brother of Emperor Francis Joseph. Princess Maria will be only seventeen years old on the next anni-versary of her birth. She has lived a life of seclusion, having been educated at Castle Reichenau. Her mother, Princess Maria Theresa of Braganza, who is the third wife of the Archduke, is a close friend of the Czarina. By the consent of their parents the Princess and the Czarewitch met at every fete given to the latter in Berlin. The Empress of Austria, who had abstained sent at two of the dinners given in honor of the Czarewitch. The reluctance of the Russian heir-apparent to marry, which was greatly troubling the Czar, is now believed to have been overcome. The question of difference of religion, according to court talk, would be no obsta-

The best men will be selected for the purpose from the bands of the different regiments. The men will be divided into two groups, one wearing the uniform of the First Infantry Guards and the other wearing the uniform of the Guard du Corps. The band will unoubtedly create a sensation in Chicago. Emperor William has not quite recovered from the effects of his recent cold. He was out for a while to-day, walking around the grounds of the

COMMISSIONS MUST GO.

Western Roads Inaugurate a Movement t Remove a Source of Trouble. CHICAGO, Nov. 26 .- A conference that resulted satisfactorily to all concerned took place, to-day, between the general agents of the Chicago-St. Paul roads and General Passenger Agent Hibbard, of the Soo line. It was brought about by Mr. Hibbard's complaint that certain Chicago roads were manipulating the market at St. Paul and Minneapolis, and the declaration that unless such practices were stopped he would be forced to reduce rates between the twin cities and the sea-board. It was agreed by all that the whole trouble had been brought about by the excessive commissions paid. A resolution was adopted declaring it to be the sense of the meeting that a committee should be appointed to co-operate with the Soo line and anadian Pacific in taking up the general question of the demoralization of rates, both east and west bound, through steamship agents. As this is a matter in which all the Western roads are interested, the appointed of the committee was referred to the western Passenger Associaon. The idea entertained by those present at the conference is that this is the beginning of a concerted effort on the part of the railroads to wipe out or bring under control the payment of commissions on west-bound emigrant busi-

Flour Rates Increased.

CHICAGO, Nov. 26 .- Chairman Midgley, of the Western Freight Association, has achieved another important victory. He has overcome the objection of the roads which, at the meeting in St. Faul last Tuesday, voted against the proposed advance in flour rates from Minneapolis to the sea-board. He announced to-day that all the roads are now agreed and the rate on flour would be advanced from 35 to 3719 cents per one hundred pounds. This will remove the discrepancy existing between the local rate, Minneapolis to Chicago, and the proportion of the through rate on shipments to the East. Both will now be on the basis of 1212 cents. Chesp Fares for the People. LOCAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE.

While a holiday somewhat interfered with the trade of the week in most departments, it exceeded expectations, and an prices prevailed. The oldest merchants of goods as are now noticeable. In dry which some advance in prices has days. Coffees are 2 cents per pound higher than on the first day of November. In the iron and hardware lines firm prices rale, and even the hide market, which has been duil and weak all summer, shows some life and a firmer tone to prices. In the produce line seldom is there more activity, and seldom are prices so generally above the usual fall and early winter range. So far as fruits and vegetables are concerned, there is no indication of an early weakening. Poultry and came are the only lines in which prices range about While grain the last day or two has been firmer in tone on some grades of corn and wheat, there is no activity worthy of mention to the market. As for some weeks past, it drags under a visible supply exceeding that ever known in November.

In oats there was a little changing from December to January at 1c, and to May at be. Prices had 4e range, and the close was easy at 18 @14c decline from yesterday. Provisions showed decided strength for s time. Steever, presumably acting for Cudaby, was a large buyer of May pork, and at times provisions generally were bought freely by brokers who nausily act for Armour. A rise of 1 shilling in lard in the Liverpool market boosted up prices here, and the entire market responded to a local advance of 5c per pounds in hogs. During the latter part of the session prices declined on larger offerings and a reduced demand. The estimated hog supply for the coming week favors only moderate offerings, in marked contrast with the enormous receipts for the corresponding week of 1:91. Price changes were contined within a range of 20c. Freights were slow, with very little vessel room offered. Rates were firm, 240 being paid for corn to Buffalo. TIME IS MONEY. The Selling of the Correct Article Brings Large Revenue to the Western Union. Washington Letter.

The five-feet time ball to be dropped at the world's fair will be made of a canvas on a steel frame. It will be wound up each day to the height from which it is to fall, and it will be set and electrically connected an such a manner that the breaking of the circuit at 12 noon will release it. cable by which it will be controlled has already been laid connecting the new observatory with the entire Western Union telegraph system. Within thirty days it will be in operation, the touch of a button at the Washington end of it instantaneously transmitting notice of the hour over 350,000 miles of wire. When that button speaks the whole country will listen, and the hands of 70,000 electric clocks all over the United States will point to the correct minute and second. There are 7,000 such clocks in New York city alone. All railways, factories and industries of every kind pay attention to this signal. Three minutes before noon each day all the Western Union lines are cleared of business. every operator takes his finger from the key, circuits are opened, and, at the instant when the sun passes over the seventyfifth meridian, the spark of intelligence is flashed to all parts of the country. It requires less than one-fifth of a second to reach San Francisco. The 12 o'clock signal sent from Washington indicates 11 A. M. for Chicago, 10 A. M. for Omaha and 9 A. M. for the Pacific coast, the United States being divided into four perpendicular strips, and each strip setting its clocks by the time of the meridian which bisects it from north to south. Thus each strip is always one hour later than the next strip to the east. The Western Union company earns about $1,000,000 anmusliv from its electric clock service, charging $15 a year for setting each clock at noon daily. The time sold thus profitably it gets from the government for nothing, but anybody can have the same privilege free of charge by putting an instrument and wire

The same advertisement is in the Evening Sun, but I don't seem to hear from that at all, yet I suppose that the edition is not smaller than that of the morning issue."

Cheese and Digestion. New York Recorder.

If we may credit the report of a German chemist the numan stomach finds in cheese a pretty tough morsel, the best-known varieties occupying from four to ten bours in digestion in healthy stomachs. In view of the fact that thousands of men and women eat cheese, believing that it facilitates digestion, this report is interesting, to say the least.

it is, indeed, a rarity to find among the peopl who have lived here any time a perfectly healty nose and throat. Such repeated sudden extremes of hot and cold dams weather, which are so common in this location, are ruinous to the throats of even temporary visitors with perfectly healthy respiratory organs; and the effect is so marked, the condition so universal among the inhabitants of this city, that children of catarrhal parents are born with a swollen, catarrhal condition of the meide of the nose and throat, which within very few years closes the nostrils so that proper respiration is impossible, and the child becomes what physicians call a "mouth-breather." meet these children constantly in the streets. From the condition of a "mouth-breather" it is but a short step to one of two results-more often both-deafness, and that pepression of countenance so characteristic of the "mouth-breather." To parents who have the welfare of their children as heart such a warning as this should be of sacred importance. As soon as the child gives evidence of a tendency to breathe constantly through its mouth just so soon should intelligent medical investigation be made of its nostrils, preferably by a proper specialist.

How "Brother Jonathan" Originated. Harper's Young People.

It seems strange to speak of the United States as "Brother Jonathan," and the wonder is how it ever began; but on inquiring into the matter we find that the enstom' arose from an ordinary remark made by General Washington at the begining of the revolutionary war. On going to Massachusetts to organize the army, h found it scant of ammunition and all means of defense; and no one could sugthing must be done at once for the public safety; and General Washington, who had great confidence in the judgment of Governor Jonathan Trumbull, of Connecticut said in this dilemma, "We must consult Brother Jonathan on the subject."

"Brother Jonathan" was equal to the ocnecessities; and afterward during the war it became the custom in any emergency. to say: "We must consult Brother Jonathan."
In time the name became applied to the whole country, and it is pleasant to know that the great Washington himself was the originator of it.
